Dear FCC, I'm writing to express my extreme opposition to lifting the ban on cell phone use aboard airplanes. I can only imagine the noisy, unpleasant situation on any flight if people are all chatting away loudly while others are trying to sleep, read or relax. If business-type folk need to communicate, they can use an IM or email (once that's available). But it'll be the regular people, just calling to chat because they're bored that will annoy us. No one needs to use a cell phone on a plane. They've flown without cell phones since commercial air travel came into existence. The FAA has been concerned with noise pollution for a long time, and now the FCC and the airlines are going to bring it on board the plane. It's important to maintain some standards for public behavior.

You will see countless law suits against the airlines and the FCC once the fights start to break out, and I believe they will. The vast majority of passengers do not want to listen to this.

THIS IS A MENTAL HEALTH ISSUE.

Please -- put yourself in that situation, think about it and keep the ban intact

Thank you for listening.
